Market Overview ↗

The Al Ain real estate market remained broadly unchanged, with demand recorded across all asset classes.

The residential market continued to be dominated by internal migration, with existing residents driving demand. As a result, overall apartment and villa rental rates remained relatively stable. However, the market is price sensitive. Proactive landlords with older apartment stock have accepted modest rental discounts to maintain occupancy levels amidst increased tenant options.

During Q2 2023, a limited number of residential buildings were handed over in Town Center. Further completions within the area are anticipated before the end of 2023, albeit on a small scale.

The Food and Beverages (F&B) sector drove a rise in interest for retail units, although Asteco expects that this increased demand will take time to translate into upward pressure on rental rates.
